After his first trip to Iraq in 2004, he has reported from numerous countries, including Lebanon, Pakistan and Afghanistan. From 1998 to 2000, he has covered the Kosovo War for Panorama magazine. In addition, he worked for the Frankfurter Rundschau from 1992 to 1995 and served as a correspondent in Bonn and Washington. The concept of identity is inherently circular. Identity is inferred from self-esteem, in turn linked to self-esteem, which is inferred from self-identity. This self-identity may itself be inferred from a sense of self-worth or, more abstractly, as an experienced state of being. Drawing on research in a clinical context, this article explores how feelings of self-worth and experience of self-identity may change in response to traumatic experiences. Two case examples are used to illustrate how, through these processes, patients make sense of their painful life experiences and search for a sense of worth. I am having trouble calling a function defined in the same callback function with AngularJS. In the code below I expect to call example2() upon the change event of the select element "comboDate", but the function never fires. How can this be done correctly? Thank you in advance. var comboController = function($scope) { $scope.example1 = function() { $scope.example2(); }; $scope.example2 = function() { console.log("Example2 fired!"); }; } var comboModule = angular.module("combobutton", []); combobutton.controller
